Dear Ansel Condray

You must be proud to run such a great organisation as Esso. One of the largest companies in the world, known across the globe for its work, which has met the energy needs of billions of people. Not many people can say that.

I want to applaud you for your stance on climate change. As a member of the Global Climate Coalition you are taking a lead to fight the gigantic whopper that is global warming.

I see that Exxon Mobil partly funded George Bush's bid for the White House and is the only oil company to not invest in renewable energy.

Well done for standing up to the StopEsso campaign with their lies alleging that you sabotaged the Kyoto agreement, misinform US policy makers and confuse the American public (is that so difficult to do?). They say that you fund the Competitive Enterprise Institute that disseminates propaganda saying climate change does not exist. Congratulations to you if you do.

When I went to the link on your website about reducing greenhouse gas emissions the page would not load. Very shrewd. It gives the appearance of doing something while not actually showing how. I wish I had thought of that one for my own range of websites.

Knowing your work to fight the greens I always go to your petrol station with pride. Bring back the tiger in your tank and I'd be a very happy man.

I'd appreciate to hear what Esso can do to keep the greens in their place.

In the meantime, good luck to you and your fine company.

Yours sincerely

Peter Shullot
